The Dumbells, Canadian Veterans, Present Lively Entertainment at Ambassador.

Something different came into Broadway last night when "The Dumbells," very one of whom served at least ghteen months with the Canadian every one of whom served at least eighteen months with the Canadian troops in France during the war, arrived at the Ambassador Theatre in a remarkably variegated revue called Birl' Bing! Bang!" The cast of thirty members, which has been brought to New York by Capt. M. W. Plunkett, has been taken from the official entertainment corps of the Third Division of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces in France, Every man of them did his "bit" in the trenches, and some of them were the original "Princess Fats" (P. P. C. L. I.), that helped make history as well as fun in the trenches of France and Belgium.

as well as fun in the trenches of Fland and Belgium.

Yet, wisely, "Biff! Bing! Bang!" is only reminiscent of the war and recalls those glorious days with bits of cleverness reaching from the noble to the utterly ridiculous in a manner to produce a vaudeville show that should not be missed by the persons who like to have their fancies for entertainment turned from an accustomed course. It is a first class laugh provoker and hasn't a dry moment in its two acts and twenty seenes.

Naturally there is not a woman in the cast. But there doesn't have to be, as among those war veteran players are three of the best female impersonators that the filty first class theatres of this city have brought forward in recent years. They are Ross Hamilton, who, as a fine figure of a man makes up in a manner that should make any woman proud of her sex; Arthur Holland, who is mort typical of the French soubrette than some of the real article recently imported into this city, and Fred Fenwick, who, with a "biff, bang" at the close of the war in the opening scene, shakes off his aviator's uniform and becomes a sprightly chorus girl in short.

shakes off his aviator's uniform and becomes a sprightly chorus girl in short waits spangled skirt and black slik stockings. Mr. Hamilton talks in virile barytone, but sings in mellifluous inezzo-soprano.

"The Dumbells" kept that sort of spirit up right through their performance of two and a baif hours. There are several excellent humorists in the company and among them stands out Jimmy Goode, whose part is that of one of the few "coons" who got into the Canadian service.

He instructs the members of the orchestra how to play their several integration."

Col. and Mrs. King are members of families that have long occupied places

Canadian service.

He instructs the members of the orchestra how to play their several instruments and eyen makes music out of a simulated basplpes contrived from a hot-water bottle and three small brooms. Goode had the good taste to refer only once before the New York audience to the delicate subject of prohibition. He had, he said, obtained a ten day leave to go to "that smoke hole where the King works" when the train reached Boulogne. On the platform was a man asking hysterically if an officer from Montreal might be aboard. Gen. Curry poked his head from the window and replied: "I am from Montreal. What is it?" "Thank Heaven," replied the hysterical person. "Let me have your corkscrew."

The "Dumbells" sing as well as they act in a dozen solos, duets and ensembles and in one of the latter is an ingenious setting of Dvorak's "Humoresque," played by a violin and planoagainst an octet singing a familiar Southern melody.

The "Dumbells" made a hit, but their chief claim to fame is their introduction of Ross Hamilton as a female impersonator.

PETER T. BARLOW

Well Known New York Judge Stricken in Chicago on Way Home.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALI Chicago, May 9.—Magistrate Peter T. Barlow of New York died to-day at Magistrate Peter Townsend Barlow in his fourteen years on the bench won for himself the reputation of being one of the most humane judges who ever dispensed justice to the myriads of weak and wicked whose transgressions brought them to the police court.

He was born in New York in 1857, the son of Samuel L. M. Barlow. After his graduation from Harvard with the class of '79 he studied at the Columbia Law School for two years and shortly afterward was admitted to the bar. For more than twenty years he practised law. In 1903 Mayor McClellan appointed him a city Magistrate, and in 1913 Mayor Mitchell reappointed him.

A Just Judge.

In all the fourteen years of his service he never lost his first eager delight in studying from the vantage point of the bench men and women and tangled motives. In appearance he never failed to impress the defendant, the opposing lawyers and the witnesses, for he was a big man with a firm face, grave eyes, a long beard, and beneath it all a very nimble wit. Once during a hot spell in summer he held court in his shirt sleeves, but Barlow in shirt sleeves commanded more respect than many another magistrate in a black robe.

A typical instance of justice as he meted it out was the case of a deaf mute arraigned before him for begging in writing for enough money to take him to his home in Albany. Magistrate Barlow heard the evidence, found him guilty and gravely fined him $1$. He then paid the fine, gave the man enough money to take him to Albany and sent a court attendant with him to see he got on the boat safely. He frequently fined offenders whose poverty had caused them to commit minor infractions and then gave them money and addresses where they could get work.
